

Detailed Lesson Plan in English 7

Grade Level: Grade 7

Subject: English

Topic: Elements of a Short Story: Types of Characters and Characterization

Time Allotment: 50 minutes

Materials: Television, Laptop, Power point, Whiteboard Marker, Instructional Materials

I. Objectives

By the end of the lesson, students should be able to:

1. Distinguish the different types of characters in a story;
2. Demonstrate the diverse characteristic of a role;
3. Relate to the personas' nuances, behaviors, and intentions displayed in a narrative.

Value/s Integration:

Compassion

II. Subject Matter

Topic: Elements of a Short Story: Types of Characters and Characterization

Reference: English 7 - Types of Characters & Characterization

<https://www.studocu.com/ph/document/baco-community-college/professional-education/detailed-lesson-plan/118211695>

Materials: Television, Laptop, Power point, Whiteboard Marker, Instructional Materials

III. Procedure

Teachers' Questions/Activities	Expected Students' Response
A. Routine Activities Prayer: The teacher will ask a student to lead the prayer. . Greetings: The teacher will greet the students “Good morning, class! How are you today?” Classroom Management: The teacher will manage the class before the instruction starts. “Before you take your seat, kindly pick up the pieces of papers under your chairs and kindly prepare yourself for today’s discussion. All right, please be seated. Attendance: The teacher will ask the class secretary for attendance.	A student will lead the prayer. Good Morning, teachers! We are fine, thank you. Students will pick up the papers and take their seat properly.

“Secretary, do we have any absentees today?” B. Review The teacher will ask if the students remember the last lesson. “Alright, before we move forward to the next part of our session. I want to ask you, "What do you remember from our last discussion?" “Very good! Can you give me one part of the plot structure?” Transition: Now, we will move to our little ice breaker.	(The secretary will declare the absentees.) “Last time, we studied about the plot of a short story.” “Rising action, Ma’am.”
C. Motivation The teacher will provide an activity before the start of discussion. “Before we start our new lesson, we will be having an activity called “Guess it to Win it”. I’ll show you cropped images of different characters and you will guess who is in that picture. Are you ready, class? Okay, let’s start! 	“Yes, ma’am! The students will answer and participate. 1. Sven 2. Olaf 3. Hans 4. Elsa 5. Anna

C. Presentation The teacher will flash a powerpoint presentation labeled “Types of Characters”. “Have you encountered these words before? What do you think is the meaning of these terms?” Very well! These are one of the elements of a short story. Today, we are going to discuss the types of characters in a story. Understanding Characters and its type Character - is a person, or sometimes even an animal, who takes part in the action of a short story or other literary work. The series of events or the plot of the story shows every detail that the characters experience, which reveals the character’s traits and development. - Although the character is the product of the writer’s imagination, the character represents a real person. Types of Characters: 1. Protagonist - the main/leading character of the story who makes key decisions that affect the plot of the story. 2. Antagonist - the character who opposes or conflicts with the main character. 3. Dynamic/Round Character - they are the characters in the story who change, accept changes, act, and view the changes as part of their role as human beings. They are often known as the hero/heroine. 4. Flat/Static Characters -they are the characters that do not change. They remain static or stagnant throughout the story. They stay as who they are until the end of the story. 5. Stock or stereotype character - are fictional characters based on common social or literary stereotypes. They are often used in the background to provide	Students will look at the monitor. “Yes, they can be found in a story.” The students will listen.
---	--

interactions and relationships with the main characters.

Characterization

- is the process by which the writer reveals the personality of a character.

What can readers learn through characterization?

- Narration
- Description
- Subtitle

- When you first meet a real person or character in a book, you form judgements about that person.
- You might say something about the person such as "He's nice," or "She's friendly."
- "Nice" and "friendly" are examples of character traits. They are words that we use to describe a person's "character" or personality

Analyzing Character Traits:

- We try to figure out what a character in a book is like by paying attention to the clues the author gives us.
- This is called "Making Inferences."
- The writer can let us know what a character is like through direct and indirect characterization.

Types of Characterization:

1. Direct Characterization: the author explicitly tells the readers what they want us to know about the character by clearly stating details about him/her.

Examples:

- "She was a beautiful, intelligent, and kind-hearted woman." (The author directly tells us about her qualities.)
- "Sarah was a dedicated teacher who always put her students first." (The author directly states her character trait.)

2. Indirect Characterization: the author shows who the character is through their speech, thoughts, motivations, actions, and interactions with others. Can be determined with how they: - Dress - Act - Speak Examples: - "Why must I always sacrifice my own happiness for others?" she thought. (Her inner thoughts reveal her selfless) - "As she rushed to help the accident victim, she ripped her expensive dress." (Her actions show her kindness and selflessness.)
D. Discussion After the lesson proper, the teachers will ask for any clarification and if there's none, they will open a new discussion that shall deepen the students' understanding of characterization. Do you have any favorite character that you have in your mind? Alright, can someone share their favorite character with the class? Please stand up and face your classmates. That's great! Is your character an antagonist, protagonist or other types of character? Can you tell me what makes them that type of character? Oh that's interesting! I'd love to hear more of that another time. Any other hand, is there anyone else who also wants to share their favorite character?	The students will ask some questions until it is all clear. The students will answer the question. Students will raise their hand. The student will share their favorite character and describe it vividly. The student will answer in accordance to their chosen character. The student will explain further. Another student will provide an answer.

Transition: Now that you've mastered our lesson for today, let's try to check your understanding.
E. Application - Group Activity Game: If I were the character.... Game Mechanics: - The class will be divided into four (4) groups. - A scenario will be given to the whole class which they must complete and enact with the use of one type of character picked by their representatives. - Each group shall showcase the type of character they have chosen in a 3 minute skit performance. Scenario: It's the night before the biggest holiday break of the year. A group of students is at the train station, but due to a ticketing error, there is only one seat left on the last train heading toward everyone's hometown. Everyone desperately needs to get home for an important reason, and the station master has said the group must decide among themselves who gets the final ticket, or no one goes. If you were the character in the scenario, what would you do? Rubric Scoring: Content Creativity 40% - Reactions suit the character type and the performance is original and engaging. Delivery and Facial Expression 30% - Speaks clearly and shows appealing emotions for the character. Teamwork 15% - Shows coordination and cooperation. Time Management 15% - Finishes within the time limit.	The students will follow the instruction and do the activity.

F. Presentation of Output Group 1, are you ready to show your output? If yes, then please present your work in front. Group 2, it's your turn to present. The teacher gives constructive feedback and clarifies misconceptions.	The first group will present their work in accordance with their plan. The second group will present their work in accordance with their plan.
G. Generalization Based on our discussion today, what did you learn about the characters inside the story? Why do you think it's important to understand the differences between these characters? Teacher Summarizes: Characters play a huge role that drives the plot to be interesting, engaging, and relatable for the readers.	"We learned that there are various types of characters in a story". "It's important as it helps us recognize their roles and how they can affect the plot".
H. Evaluation Instructions: Identify what is referred to by the following statements. Write your answers in the space provided. _____ 1. The type of character who changes as the story progresses. _____ 2. It refers to the characters who are socially common and usually interact with the main character. _____ 3. The character that brings trouble the main initiator of the conflict _____ 4. Characters that remain stagnant until the end of the story. _____ 5. The main/leading character of the story who makes key decisions that affect the plot of the story.	Answer Key: 1. ROUND CHARACTER 2. STEREOTYPE CHARACTER 3. ANTAGONIST 4. FLAT/STAGNANT CHARACTER 5. PROTAGONIST

I. Assignment

Now that you have understood what the different types of characters are, we will have this assignment.

Think of two persons important in your life and describe them using the two types of characterization. Feel free to be creative in your work.

Rubrics:

Content - 50%

Cohesion - 25%

Creativity - 25%

Total score - 100%

The students will write this in their notebooks.

Prepared by

Vidal, Monique F.

Yee, Franchescka Maria Janine F.

Checked by:

Dr. Mayordomo, Jorge LPT